Once used by the railroad to transport slate from nearby quarries, the Bangor and Portland railway began operations between Bangor and Portland, Pennsylvania in 1880. The Delaware, Lackawanna, and Western railroad acquired the B & P railway as its Bangor and Portland Division in 1903 with a full merger in 1909. One of the last branches to operate steam locomotives, the Bangor Engine Terminal withdrew its last engine in 1953. Conrail purchased the railroad in 1976, and later abandoned it in 1981. In 1987, Plainfield Township purchased 6.7 miles of the railroad bed and began converting it to a recreation trail utilizing Rails to Trails, CDBG, RIRA, Penn DOT and DCNR grants.

The trail offers many beautiful views along the rural countryside and there are five bridges crossing over the Little Bushkill Creek. We hope you enjoy your time hiking and biking on the Township trail.
